The Arab Uprisings: Six Years Later

This panel will serve as a moment of calm reflection on the apparent popular disengagement in Arab spring countries and the end of street politics; on the recent international and regional dynamics and on the incapacity of democratic oppositions to consolidate a more clear vision of its aspirations.

Both of our speakers, are more than welcome to suggest different points but we need to start discussing what would be the added value of such meeting given the gloomy context in the region.

Panelists

Dr. Sinan Antoon, is an award-winning poet, novelist, scholar, and literary translator.

Max Rodenbeck, South Asia Bureau Chief, The Economist
